Pam Muñoz Ryan

www.pammunozryan.com

Pam Muñoz Ryan is the author of more than thirty children's book and young adult novels. Born and raised in Bakersfield, California, she draws from her mixed heritage to create stories that resonate with readers of cultural and linguistic backgrounds. She lived close to both her Mexican grandmother and her Oklahoman grandmother. She recalls, "When I was with one, I often ate enchiladas, rice, and beans. When I was with the other, I ate black-eyed peas, fried okra, and peach cobbles." These influences and experiences come through in her stories. For example, Mice and Beans, although not autobiographical portrays a fun-loving grandmother, preparing a family feast for one of her grandchild's birthday. She was an avid reader as a child and spent many hours reading book in her local library.

She attended Washington Junior High where she became the editor of the Washington Junior Hornet newspaper. After high school she attended Bakersfield Junior College and then transferred to San Diego State University. She married and became a bilingual teacher. She taught for three years as a bilingual Head Start teacher in Escondido, California. After her four children were born, she stayed at home for twelve years and worked part time at a local pre-school.

Once her children were in school she returned to college to receive her master's degree. This is where shortly before graduating a professor encouraged her to write. As fate may have it, shortly after, a colleague asked her to help her write a book for adults. This experience was the impetus that encouraged Ryan to pursue her career as a writer. Today her breadth in writing explores cultures, women's history, multicultural experiences, racial divides, and history. Readers of all backgrounds can identify with her characters in different situations as her stories transcend time. She is the recipient of the Civil and Human Rights Awards, The Virginia Hamilton Award for Multicultural Literature and twice the recipient of the Willa Cather Literacy Award for Writing.

Today, Ryan writes full time and lives in San Diego County, California with her husband and two dogs.

Esperanza and her family live a comfortable life in their ranch in Mexico called “El Rancho de las Rosas.” Her dream of one day presiding over the ranch is suddenly interrupted when unforeseen tragic events force Esperanza and her mother to flee to California during the Great Depression. They settle in a farm camp where they are forced to face hard labor, financial struggles, and lack of acceptance. Although in a different era, ELLs can relate to the topic of racial and economic divide, and acceptance that are still relevant to many immigrant families today. Interweaved into the text are words and phrases in Spanish as well as stanzas from popular songs that Spanish speakers will enjoy and connect with.

Ryan Muñoz, P. (2007). Paint the Wind, New York, NY: Scholastic Press

ISBN: 13: 978-0-439-0-439-87362-8

Paint the Wind is an epic story about the journey of a sheltered girl and a wild horse. Maya lives like a captive. At Grandmother's house in California, everything is forbidden: friends, fun, even memories. And her life is built on lies: lies Grandmother tells her about her dead mother, lies Maya tells to impress or manipulate. But then she moves to the vast Wyoming wilderness where her mother's family awaits – kind, rugged people who have no tolerance for lies. They challenge Maya to confront the truth about who she is. And a mysterious mustang called Artemisia waits, too. She holds the key to Maya's freedom. But to find it, Maya will have to risk everything, including her life. This story is relevant to ELL's and multicultural audiences for its themes of perseverance and life changes that at times may not be welcomed or expected.

This is a heartwarming story of friendship and the acceptance of cultural differences. Using personification, Ryan creates the story of Nacho, a proud and majestic pitacoche, a brilliantly feathered bird with “haunting songs”. One day the swallows come to nest and Nacho meets Lolita. Could two different birds find lasting love and friendship? What will happen when the swallow (and Lolita) migrate back to South America? The topics of theme, acceptance, cultural/social differences, and friendship are appealing to all students, but especially to language and culturally diverse learners whose families are often divided and far from one another.

Ryan Muñoz, P. (1998). Riding Freedom, New York, NY: Scholastic Press.

Riding Freedom is the fascinating story of Charlotte Parkhurst who fulfilled her dream of training and working with horses and ultimately owning her own horse ranch in California in the mid 1800's. The only problem is that in order for her to live her dream she must live her life as a man. In her journey she sacrifices many things including having her own family. Charlotte represents the courage, determination, and will needed at a time when Women's Rights were part of a future few could imagine. Although this story does not have multicultural elements, readers of all ages and cultures will identify with this inspiring true story because it demonstrates the need we all have to live fulfilling lives and belong to a community. This is also a good introduction to history and geography as Charlotte travels across the country in her incredible journey.

This inspiring picture book tells the journey of the singing career of Marian Anderson. This beloved contra-alto faced prejudice, discrimination, and rejection in the 1930's. With fierce determination she accepts an invitation to sing at the steps of the Lincoln Memorial for an integrated crowd of over 75,000 people during the pre Civil Rights era. The chronological sequence of her life journey, as well as, the illustrations provide the reader a unique glimpse into the magnitude of Anderson's accomplishments and how she faced it all with dignity and grace. Marian's story is a great example of the struggles and adversities African American endured and how their accomplishments and pluck have paved the way for other cultural groups and minorities.
